

COLLECT IT

Obsessions. The sweetest collection of all.

Dylan Lauren admits that she devotes "one thousand percent" of each day to sweets. "I wake up in the morning with a chai latte, have vanilla frosting on a doughnut, and after lunch will definitely have a sweet piece of gum," Dylan says. "Candy is my vice."

Daughter of designer Ralph Lauren, Dylan has a sweet tooth that's evolved into an all-out obsession with the vibrant colors and graphics in candy's pop-art packaging. She made her own art out of candy, collected other artists' work, and, in 2001, manifested her love of it all in Dylan's Candy Bar, a New York shop (with other locations across the country) brimming with more than 5,000 sweets from around the world.

At home, the office, and "the Bar," Dylan shows off the thousands of pieces of candy and paraphernalia she's collected. Some items are for sale (like a Cadbury candy-bar purse), but some are just for display, including her favorite original vintage candy packaging (right).
